Even Singapore Condones Animal Sacrifice

Only the Australian Government could create extensive regulations to apparently improve animal welfare outcomes and then allow any country with a tent, a carving knife, and a taste for blood to inflict as much pain on sheep as their barbaric religious practices encourage. For our Prime Minister to not only allow it, but attempt to justify it, is a blatant admission that this government's moral fibre is no more admirable than its commitment to the Australians it represents.

Drop a line to Singapore. Be courteous enough to tell the Singapore PM why Australians no longer wish to visit his cruel little land mass.
